Hilton Olympia heating system water samples: Visual appearance and laboratory analysis, 2003-2004.

"I was sceptical of this technology when I first met with ENWA, however, after seeing the dramatic change in water quality and the long term problems disappear it seems like an obvious solution to me".

Andrew Staley-Engineering, Facilities & Environmental Manager, Technical Services, Hilton in the UK & Ireland.

Case history

- High levels of total iron, dissolved iron and particulates identified in water samples from the heating and cooling systems.
- High reactive maintenance costs, including replacement of reverse cycle heat pumps and heat exchangers.
- Poor heat delivery to rooms, resulting from blockages in connective pipework and impaired control valves.
- Blocked strainers within boiler plant.
- £4000 cleaning cost for CHP plate heat exchangers.
- Ineffective chemical inhibition strategies.

The EnwaMatic® approach

- Progressive introduction of EnwaMatic® water treatment units, 2001-2004.
- Significant reduction in particulate and iron content within three weeks.
- Neutralisation of corrosive water chemistry and stabilisation of pH, hardness and alkalinity.
- Cost effective alternative to conventional chemical dosing systems.
- Reduced Health & Safety considerations.
- Improved Environmental performance.
